Out of tune BT ditches the piper in favour of 'connected world' logo

James Ashton

Scotsman, BUSINESS SUPPLEMENT ED, P 17

Tuesday, April 8, 2003

TEXT:

BT YESTERDAY paid off its distinctive red and blue piper, but it is hoping a new logo of six swirling blobs will enable it to call the tune in the accelerating dash for broadband customers.

BT chiefs decided the piper, introduced in 1991, should be ditched after 12 years because it was too closely associated with its fixed-line telephones and also conjured up negative attitudes towards the company.

It is being replaced with a "connected world" globe already being used by BT Openworld, the company's internet service provider.

Ben Verwaayen, BT's chief executive, said there would be no "big bang" advertising campaign for the shift. But it will cost GBP 5 million and take three years to repaint 34,000 vehicles, sew new badges on 50,000 uniforms and replace signs on 133,000 payphones.

Verwaayen said: "We are not changing image for the sake of change... We want people to experience the new BT through improved service not through a new logo.

"Only then will they credit BT with having changed."

Sheriff's deputies aim to patch up any confusion over badges

JOHN REYNOLDS STAFF WRITER

State Journal-Register Springfield, IL, P 9

Thursday, April 7, 2005

TEXT:

Sangamon County Sheriff Neil Williamson hopes a new shoulder patch design will help the public better recognize what agency his deputies represent.

The new design, which replaces a patch that has been in use since about 1976, has the word "Sheriff" prominently stitched in white at the top.

The older patch had the word "Sangamon" in white at the top, and below that were the words "County Sheriff Illinois" in red. The red stitching was smaller and difficult to read against the dark background of the old patch.

"(An average person) looking at the old patch doesn't really know what department or agency you work for. We wanted something that would better reflect what department we are with," Williamson said.

The new patch is similar to the patch worn by deputies in Summit County Colorado.

Williamson said he was visiting Breckinridge, Colo., last year and was impressed by the patch sheriff's deputies there were wearing.

"(The Summit County patch) was exactly what I had been looking for all of these years," he said.

Williamson brought back a sample of the Summit County patch, and a committee designed the new Sangamon County patch.

Deputies can continue to wear the old patch, but if they get a new uniform shirt, it will have the new patch. If they choose, they can have the new patch put on an old uniform.

An olive drab version of the new patch also was made for members of the county's tactical response team.

CAPTIONS: The new design, above top, replaces a patch that has been in use since about 1976.

pounds 1,000 TO PUT A CHILD THROUGH SECONDARY EDUCATION: The uniform cost is rising

LIVERPOOL ECHO

October 10, 2005

MARGARET Parkinson, from Tuebrook, has six children: Joshua, 16; Oliver, 12; Elliot, nine; Thomas, seven; Oonagh, five and two-year-old Mollie. Three are pupils at Sacred Heart Primary School in Kensington and two are students at De La Salle High School.

Margaret does not receive any benefits as both she and her partner work to support their children.

She said: "I understand we have chosen to have a large family and we do want to pay for them. That is the reason both myself and Paul work.

"The cost of uniforms is rising.

"I try to buy the children the absolute essentials before they return to school and then add to the uniform as the term goes on. I will often pay on the credit card so I can pay the bill off at a later date."

Margaret spends more than pounds 500 on school uniforms for her children every year - and this does not include the cost of their winter coats.

"This is something which I have not even thought about as yet but obviously that time will come very soon" I believe it to be false economy to buy cheap, low quality clothing as this just does not last. I have tried this but two months on you are then forced to buy another uniform.

"Shoes are obviously vitally important and it is crucial to protect our children's feet at a young age and buy something which will offer them support and look after their feet for the future.

"On one occasion I had bought five pairs of trousers for Elliot within the first six weeks of school because he had managed to pull them full of holes."

But one cost-saving measure which Margaret has discovered is re-using the school badge

"I will take this off their blazers each year and sew it on to their new clothing," Margaret said.

Margaret, who works nights as a nurse in the brain injury unit at Mossley Hill Hospital, added: "I initially gave up work to look after the children but decided it would be more beneficial for me to return. Now I feel as if I am being penalised because I am working

Abstract (Basic): US 20050120933 A1

NOVELTY - An article, e.g. headwear, is provided by changing the appearance of the article from a first appearance by releasing a stitching to allow a first adornment layer to be separated from the article, separating the first adornment layer from the article, providing a second adornment layer, and attaching the second adornment layer fixedly to the article.

DETAILED DESCRIPTION - Provision of article (12), e.g. headwear, having an exposed surface defined by substrate layer(s) (40), comprises stitching (26) a first adornment layer (14) fixedly to the substrate layer with thread (44) so that the article has a first appearance. The article with the first appearance is stocked to meet an actual or anticipated demand for the article having the first appearance. The appearance of the article from the first appearance is changed by releasing the stitching to allow the first adornment layer to be separated from the article, separating the first adornment layer from the article, providing a second adornment layer (16), and attaching the second adornment layer fixedly to the article. The article with the second appearance available is made to meet an actual or anticipated demand for the article.

USE - The inventive method is used in the provision of an article, e.g. headwear (claimed) such as baseball-style cap having a crown (20). The article may also include apparel items, e.g. shirts, pants, socks, dresses, coats, or purses.

ADVANTAGE - The inventive method can provide high quality, commemorative headwear on an expedited basis without the inconvenience
